About Lavazza:

Italian's enjoy an espresso in the same way that they enjoy life – which absolute passion.

In 1895, a young Italian entrepreneur by the name of Luigi Lavazza opened a grocery shop in Turin, Italy. His determination and drive to create the finest cup of espresso led him to develop the world's first commercial coffee blends in the early 1900's.

Lavazza's story is one of a successful company, but it is also the tale of a family that has worked passionately for four generations, striving to combine quality, tradition and originality as they continue to operate the largest-family owned roaster in the world.

With its widespread distribution network, today Lavazza reaches over 90 countries around the world, from Iceland to the Americas and on to Australia. It has also embarked on an intense campaign to win consumers in Eastern Europe, with Poland and Romania leading the way.
